Hiring: University Faculty and Fellows to Serve as Academic Mentors for Online International Internship Program

Goals

InGenius Prep a global education startup founded at Yale, seeks university faculty (including non-tenured and adjunct faculty) and fellows (including post-docs and teaching fellows) to serve as academic mentors for its international academic internship program, which seeks to

- 1) Provide promising international high school students opportunities to explore subjects, develop research, or pursue projects under the auspices of extraordinary university teachers
- 2) Expose aspiring and established university faculty to interested high school students from around the world eager to learn and grow

The Program

Medium: Mentorships will take place over the internet, primarily via videochat, but optional opportunities to travel abroad or host students will arise occasionally.

Types: Mentors may work with students in a variety of forms:

- Course: a one on one course designed by the mentor. E.g. "Introduction to Shakespeare", "Robotics 101", "Advanced Trigonometry".
- Guided Reading: Student and mentor organize a reading list and tutorial around a theme or topic
- Research/Project Assistance: Student assistance to mentor-led project.
- Supervised Research/Project: Mentor supervision of a student-led project.

Time Commitment: The shortest internships will involve 7 sessions and the longest will entail 20 sessions, with options to extend it even longer. Ordinarily, sessions will be either weekly or twice-weekly.

Mentors will be presented with student information and internship length prior to agreeing to any particular mentorship relationship.

Requirements

Qualified applicants are supportive mentors who love teaching and are eager to have at least one personal, one-on-one mentorship opportunity with a student from around the world. They should have an advanced degree. A teaching affiliation with a top US college or university is preferred.

Hours + Pay:

Pay is commensurate with experience, length and quality of internship, and averages between $50 to $100 per hour, including estimated prep time.

To Apply:

Qualified applicants should submit their resume, a link to their university web page (or LinkedIn profile), and a brief email of interest to InGenius Prep's Chief Education Officer, Noah Greenfield, at noah@ingeniusprep.com.
